FOREWORD

In a reference book devoted to information about literary folk and their work, there is a wealth of material from which the reader or student may draw both knowledge and inspiration. In this volume V, Who's Who Among North American Authors, the titles of many thousands of books appear, as well as references to a multitude of magazine and press articles, the culling of which should be both enlightening and stimulating. For handy reference, moreover, the work is divided into two sections, distinguishing those who have had their writings published in book form, and those who have contributed only to the press. Among the latter are editors, newspaper and magazine writers, and many who have written highly technical matter for transactions, proceedings, government bulletins and encyclopedias.

We have made great forward strides since the introduction of this work in 1921. Volume I contained 1700 entries; in Volume II, 3800 names appeared; Volume III rose to 7000 inclusions; Volume IV contained the biographical data of more than 10,000 authors, and this present volume climbs well toward the number of 14,000 biographical sketches of authors and writers of the United States and Canada, which territory this reference book is designed to cover. There will also be found data from Mexico, and the various possessions of the North American countries. Who's Who Among North American Authors appears every two years, and the editor invites correspondence from those whose writing leads them either into the field of book production or press work. Inclusion cannot be paid for, the standard of literary excellence being the only admission possible. All sketches are gained direct from the author, insuring accuracy of detail and dates.

The growth of Who's Who Among North American Authors as a reference work in its particular subject matter has been so phenomenal that in order to better cover the field we now have editorial quarters in New York as well as Los Angeles. Persons desiring to be included in Volume VI, 1933-1934, can address the editorial department to either 152 West 42nd St., New York, N. Y.; or to Los Angeles, California.

In point of territorial distribution, only living authors of the United States and Canada (and their possessions and neighbors), who have either been born in these countries, or who have lived and worked therein, can be considered North American authors. In a few cases, however, authors of American parentage, although born and living in a foreign country have been included in view of their American or Canadian parentage; and such applications for admission to Volume VI—1933-1934—will be considered.

It is fitting that we mention we now also publish Who's Who Among Living Authors of Older Nations, which book has a like scope and the same general physical appearance as this work; also Who's Who Among International Medical Writers, and Who's Who Among World Writers on Law. Thus the whole earth is circled by these four reference works on authors and writers, cementing all nations and peoples into active, working, companionable relationship with each other; affording to the public a true means of information, literary help and a notable list of professional writings on literature, science, medicine, law and various other classifications. The editor will also appreciate correspondence from medical writers, or writers on law, that we may consider them for inclusion in the last two books mentioned. These are now being revised and enlarged for issuance at an early date; the Introductory volume of each title having already been published.

Public libraries, universities, colleges and teachers training institutions all over the world are using Who's Who Among North American Authors as a standard reference work. Many public school systems of our country have installed it as the text book on authors in the school curriculum.

We express our sincere thanks and appreciation to all who have aided in the upbuilding of Who's Who Among North American Authors.

Is part Indian (Miami) and has learned the Indian principles of liberating the voice which is accomplished primarily through a series of manipulations of the head and face. These strokes sensitize the tissues by stimulating the circulations, so that when the vibrating air, which is the voices, passes over them along its natural tone channel, the tissues give forth a more pleasing, resonant quality sound. It takes only a short time to prepare voices for public use in this way and they are from two to five or six tones longer in range than those prepared in the white man's way. The play, "Ping," is for stage proper. CLUBS: Southern California, Woman's Press Club. Relig. denom., Episcopalian. ADDRESS: 8118 Norton Ave., West Hollywood, Calif.

Contributor to The Producer, American Forests and Forest Life, Journal of the Torrey Botanical Club, Proc. of the Biological Society of Washington. General character of writing: range research. The office of range research of the United States Forest Service conducts the research on about 90,000,000 acres comprising the range lands of the National Forests. Its object is to determine how lands suitable for grazing can be made use of to best advantage, all things considered. Its results are also applicable in varying degree to about 600,000,000 acres of the western range lands, public and private. These western range lands support a livestock industry worth approximately two billion dollars and produce almost 70 per cent of the feed utilized by the live-stock of the 11 far-western states. The forage crop is produced by upwards of 10,000 species of plants, whose varying requirements, life-histories, palatabilities, etc., furnish the key to successful range management.
